

ABSTRACT

The invention may be broadly conceptualized as an approach in which a wireless device is able to receive broadcast data over a payload channel established in another network and establishing payload channels directly with the wireless device when high bandwidth data exchanges are need, and in times of emergency enabling barge-in functionality controlled by the management network.